Second deadline looms for business filings that are already past due

LINCOLN – A sizeable number of foreign and domestic business entities have yet to file their annual and biennial reports with the Secretary of State’s office. Secretary John Gale says if no action is taken immediately, they could lose their ability to operate in Nebraska.

Nearly 14,000 entities are impacted. Of those, 12,095 are limited liability companies (LLCs), 1,823 are nonprofit corporations and 29 are limited liability partnerships (LLPs). All of these entities missed the initial filing deadline of April 1. Domestic entities that fail to file by Thursday, June 1 face administrative dissolution. For foreign entities, their authority to do business could be revoked.

“Reminders were sent to those entities that missed the April 1 deadline and now they risk missing this second deadline,” noted Gale. “If they do not file, but wish to remain in good standing, those entities will be required to reinstate or refile and they will be assessed a reinstatement fee in addition to any payments that are past due.”

With a deadline looming, Gale encouraged delinquent entities to file electronically. “Links are available to the appropriate filing applications on the main page of the Secretary of State’s website, www.sos.ne.gov.”

At the start of the year, filing notices were mailed to around 90,000 business entities, including to those that are now past due.
